A WORLD FAMOUS RESTAURANT

Each year Hackney's Restaurant caters to approximately 800,000 of Atlantic City's visitors. It numbers among its patrons some of the most outstanding celebrities in every phase of American life, and has had diners whose homes have been far across the seas.

Founded in 1912 by Harry Hackney, the restaurant has grown in size and fame until today it is a world-famous institution—in fact, as "Famous as the Boardwalk."

With a seating capacity of 3,000, this remarkable restaurant is almost a block long, and has served more than 14,000 persons in one day. On busy days in the summer season it is not unusual for Hackney's to serve 4,000 orders of fish, 2,000 deviled crabs, 1,500 lobsters, 500 steaks, and 500 chickens, plus the many other items listed on the menu. Located on the Boardwalk directly on the Atlantic Ocean, every table offers a broad view of the mighty and beautiful Atlantic. You are literally "dining at sea."

Hackney's Restaurant is under the constant supervision of Ed and Ralph Hackney and its executive staff, and any or all would be most happy to greet you personally during your visit.
